NOON REPORTS.

NEW YORK, June 12. - The steamer Narragansett, which left New York last evening for Stonington, and the Stonington which left Stonington for New York, collided on the Connecticut River about 11:15 p. m. The former took fire and sunk.

The steamer Stonington arrivel at 6:30 o'clock this morning with about fif.y survivors of the steamer Narragansett. The bow of the former struck the Narragan-sett three feet aft of the stem cutting down nearly to the water line. She struck the Narragansett at 11:30 o'clock on the starboard side forward of her wheel-house The shock burst the gas tank, and in 15 minutes the Narragansett was on tire. She sunk in four fathoms of water. The steamers City of New York and Providence came to her assistance, and all the boats and life rafts of four steamers were lowered and put in service.

Two hours elapsed before the last passenger was picked up, most of whom were transferred to the City of New York. The passengers say the officers and crew of the Narragansett behaved with great coolness and nerve. On their arrival at Stonington the village was aroused, and men and women hastened with clothing and assistance Twenty-five women were on board in the r night clothes, one of whom died before reaching here from the shock. She has not yet been identified. One man also died, Rev. E. B. Lockwood, of Sixty eighth street Methodist Church, New York. He was on his first trip Eas'. No estimate can be made of the loss of life, but it is believed that it will be less than at first supposed. Another account says the surviving passengers from the ill-tated Narragansett all agree that out of the passenger list of more than 300 a large number must have been lost, as the water around the burning steamer was alive with struggling people clinging to rafts and every conceivable thing. It is feared that most of the pas-sengers that were in berths below the main deck did not have time to save themselves.

Mr. Scales, of North Carolina, submitted the report on the "Ute agreement" bill. He stated that the bill, as agreed to, provided that if there should be sufficient arable land in Colorado, Indians should be settled in that State, but if not, then that they should be settled in Utan and New Mexico. The report was agreed to, and the House then resumed the consideration of the Senate resolution proposing a joint rule for counting the electoral vote, and was addressed by Van Voorhis, of New York, in opposition to the measure.

The Steamship Disaster:

NEW YORK, June 12 .- Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Silson, of Atlanta, Ga., were out their way East with their two little child dren. It appears that they took passage on the ill fated Narragansett. When the disaster occurred the children, who were locked up in the state room, were, for the moment, forgotten and it is supposed that both babies were burned before any assistance could be obtained, and the poor mother, when she realized her loss, was in paroxysms of grief. An old lady, Margar-

A boy named Charley Case, about 12 years of age, residing in Jersey city, who, with his father, was on their way to Boston on the Narragansett, was placed by his father on a life rift with the assurance that the lad would be taken good care of by him. After a long and severe struggle the father disappeared ed in a life boat after the collision, but the boat was capsized. Mrs. Dix, her nurse, baby, little boy and girl clung to the boat, but the boat was turned over in some way three times, and Mrs. Dix saw her baby, her nurse, and her little boy and girl washed away. She and another lady were the only ones left in the boat.

Boston, Mass., June 12 - According to the story of Cornelius Henry of this city, there must have been a great many lives lost. He says that at the time the Narragausett, on which he took passage from New York, left that city there were between 3.0 and 400 pass sengers on board. That at that time all the berths and state rooms were engaged. It was very foggy and most of the pussengers had retired. I think that with the exception of officers, I was the only one on the Narragansett that was up and saw the Son-ington when she struck us. We were run-ning at a pretty fair rate of speed at the time, as was also the Stonington. It struck us amidships on the star board side and raked us clear to wheel. The force of the collision caused the Narragansett to list heavily to port and in less than five minutes she went down as far as main deck and grounded. Shortly after that I saw a sheet of flame shoot up out of the engine room and in less time than I can describe at the entire ship was on fire. In a moment I saw what had happened; I rushed for the Hurricane deck and tried to east loose the life raft which was there, but was unsuccessful. By this time the fire had gained

By 11 p. m. nearly everybody was in bed and all on board quiet. About 11.45 there was a sudden crash, and in a moment there was terrible confusion. Men, women and children, in all stages of undress, rushed frantically from their berths to the upper lecks. For a few moments everybody thought the boat was sinking, and there was a struggle for life preservers. It was soon seen that the steamer into which the

The shrieks and cries of the passengers on the Narragauset were distinctly audible on the Stonington. They could be seen teaping into the water and rushing franti-cally in all directions. The boats of the Stonington were lowered, after a delay of several minutes, and by that time the Narragansett had settled and was sinking.

Narragansett had settled and was slaking. By some blunder the plugs in the life boa's were left out and they filled with water. This caused an additional delay. The men in the boats did not know how to row them. At last they reached the scene of the wreck and pieked up a number of persons floating on life preservers, mattrassas, tables, itc. The scene was appelling at this juncture. The steamer City of New York came up and lay off at some distance, she came up and lay off at some distance, she lowered boats and picked up as many drowning passengers she could find. When all hope of further rescues was abandoned, the Stonington after transferring some of the rescued passengers, 175 in number to the City of New York, which was afraid of going ashore, then started for New York with the rescued passengers on board. It is not known how many if any remained on the Stonington. Many of the passen-gers rescued were badly scalded, others

THE GOVERNOR AND HIS OFFICE

The Democratic Convention will meet in this city on Thursday next. Many worthy men have been put forward for nomination to the Gubernatorial chair during an active and sometimes bitter canvass. It is a pleasant testimony to the pleasanter fact that there is no lack of men of high civic virtues among us, such men being the best possessions of a commonwealth. But the people, we think, have manifestly made up their minds to have one of two men. Governor JARVIS or Judge Fowle will. almost certainly, be the nominee of the Convention. Either is worthy to be Governor of North Carolina. Either will make a vigorous canvass. Either ought to receive the heartiest support of every North Carolina Democrat. Certainly, either will receive from THE NEWS its most earnest support before and its heartiest co-operation after election. We are not be lievers in that policy of these latter days which seeks to tear down so soon as we have succeeded in building up: Nor are we of those who think it right to attempt the advancement of one Democrat by maligning the character, assailing the mo tives, or distorting the political or personal record of another Democrat. We de have, however, our own notions of th present importance of the office of Gover nor, of the strength of the respective can didates, and of the necessities of the ap proaching canvass. And we believe also that man or newspaper may say anything to anybody, if it only know how to say it That is to say, as a favorite writer expresse it, with kindliness, good temper, and calm justice: free from "bumptiousness," and above all from the smallest suspicion of envy, malice and all uncharitableness Under such conditions, the act of "speaking one's mind," usually so obnoxious, is shorn of its harmfulness, and even faultfinding becomes less a weapon of offence than a surgeon's lancet, used not for injury.

But we have no intention of fault-finding with anybody or anything. All we desire to do to-day is to tell the readers of The News, as some months ago we told the readers of HALE'S WEEKLY, what we think are the party's present needs in a candidate for Governor and the State's needs in its Governor.

Prior to the Constitution of 1835, un der what may be called the old regime, umber of citizens distinguished for their social position and success in practical pursuits were elevated to that station. Their good breeding, their dignity of deportment, their ample means and boundless hospitality enabled them to play their part not unacceptably. They had in fact but little to do. The difference is immense between what the State was then and what it is now. There existed not then a single Railroad within her bounds; there were no great penal institutions. Our great charitable institutions had not then been thought of. A slightly improved navigation had been introduced upon a few of our rivers; a short canal or two had been constructed. These were all of our pubic improvements, or nearly so. The Governor and Directors met together about once a year and exchanged a half dozen words about the concerns of these several andertakings, and then adjourned till the next annual meeting. Many who love the "olden times" regret hat they have passed away, and would be glad to see the solid farner, merchant or manufacturer of the old chool seated once more in the Execuive chair; but those who are acquainted with the progress of the State know that he periods of the administrations above eferred to were periods of utter stagnaion. Nor can we wonder that they were o. Our rulers were men possessed of no reat vigor of intellect-no breadth of iew; hence they produced no impression n the popular mind. They went through heir duties in a certain perfunctory rouine sort of way, and left no memorial ehind them. Their very names have assed into oblivion. Few other States ave ventured upon such expedients ; they

The change in the Constitution above eferred to, has indeed changed all that nother order of men is now demanded he interests of the State have greatly ultiplied and expanded; and the duties f the Executive have become more oner us and important. He who fills that chair hould be acquainted with the resources of he State, should be able to take a wide arvey of her institutions, and should be apable of digesting, maturing and recomending by "just argument" enlarged hemes for her advancement. This was the contemplation of the framers of the onstitution when they required the Govrnor "to give information of the affairs of he State, and recommend such measures he shall deem expedient." ernment have grown with each year more complicated and delicate: to meet and dispose of questions of such magnitude as now arise, requires a knowledge of government—its history and limitations—of the Constitution of the State and of the United States, as well as an intimate acquaintance with constitutional law. But further: The candidate for Governor ought to be candidate for Governor ought to be a ready and effective speaker. He goes forth on no mere pageant to display the honors of his nomination. He goes forth as the champion of the principles of a great party. It is his mission to vindicate those principles against all opposers; to impress them upon the popular mind, and to commend them to the popular judgment. He has an able antagonist always at hand, or if that antagonist happens to be out of the way, the candidate is confronted by the best speakers on the opposite side wherever he may go.

If this is true of an ordinary Gubernaorial canvass, it applies with tenfold force to the canvass in which a Presidential elec tion occurs. Onestions of Federal character are then brought into discussionquestions to which the highest talent, the most disciplined understanding and the widest range of acquirement are not more than equal. This is peculiarly true of the next Presidential election. The questions which will be then discussed, go to the very foundations of the Government. The Federal Government has been so changed, that no man will say that the government of to-day is the government of our fathers. The elements of evil are still actively at work. The spirit of usurpation reigns supreme in every movement of the Federal Government. Political fraud, with daring and shameless hand, has attacked suffrage-the very sheet-anchor of our institutions-with such fatal effect that the whole fabric of government has been undermined. It would be but too easy to multiply these specifications, but that would lead us beyond our purpose. Enough has been said to show the momentous and wide-reaching character of the issues of the next canvass.

Who shall make it? On this point we think that the minds of most thoughtful men are already settled. That the present Governor possesses in a high degree all the mental qualifications above adverted to, nobody will deny: that he has displayed sound administrative ability and loyal devotion to the State, all will admit; that he has the personal elements necessary to win popular favor has been amply proved. Undoubtedly there is no lack of men of intelligence, moral worth and practical judgment in North after every county would furnish scores Undoubtedly there are many men in North Carolina the equals, probably the superiors of Governor JARVIS in one or another requisite to fitness for the work that lies before us. Burkaken all in all, the Governor of North Carolina is to-day the foremost man in the State, and in the long line of his predecessors not one has been truer or wiser. He has that vital necessity to success, "the aptitude for seeing the right moment to do a thing, and doing it without rashness, but also without delay." Circumstances have moulded his disposition into a well-tempered combination of foresight, boldness and caution, and in the long years of valuable and unrequited service of the State there has been not one false step.

CINCINNATI.

There seems to be quite an active canvass going on at Washington of the merits and chances of election of the distinguished Democrats whose names will be placed before the Cincinnati Convention next week. Among them all there is not one who will not find ready acceptance and hearty support from the solid South. So far, Mr. TILDEN leads in number of delegates, and if claims upon the party could be recognized, as such claims ought never to be, he has them above all other men But the only claims we acknowledge are the claims of the party upon its members, and if the troubles in Mr. TILDEN's State make his election doubtful, beyond all doubt he will stand aside, or failing that should be put aside. The fight is for principles, not men; to win, not to be beaten. There is a hard struggle before us and we cannot afford to trifle or to experiment with possibilities. Who can win?

The vote of New York added to the vote of the solid South will give us the victory. Beyond all doubt, New York can be carried by Thomas F. Bayard. In every respect a man fit to be President, he is also the embodiment of the good old Democratic doctrine—Free Trade! Honest Money! Home Rule! and it is upon that honored platform that New York is to be carried by the Democracy.

It is possible, not probable, that Judge Thurman might carry Ohio. If it were reasonably certain, we should say that Judge Thurman would be the proper nominee for Vice-President. But the only Western State upon which the Democracy can count is Indiana; and the nomination of Thomas A. Hendricks will make Indiana a certainty for the Democratic nominees, and their election absolutely sure.

The ticket to win is THOMAS F. BAY-ARD and THOMAS A. HENDRICKS.

THE Secretary of the Treasury has reported to Congress the cost of the Federal war upon the Confederate States. It foots up $6,187,243,385. Who can take in so big a sum?

ABOUT FIGURES.

There are some floating notions that annot be easily set straight. Three or four times, we think, our friend of the Wilmington Star and we have had a bout n regard to the votes cast for TILDEN and VANCE respectively in 1876, our friend each time yielding to the stern logic of the facts as stowed away in the State Capitol-Yet in yesterday's Star the old statement in a new shape makes its appearance, copied from the Salisbury Democrat, thus : ZEB. VANCE was considered the strongest man in the State in 1876; yet FOWLE, as elector, got 2,400 more votes than any other man before the people for anything. But the JARvis men say that was because he was a Presidential elector. They forget that there were other electors, and his vote largely exceeded that of the others." This is all a mistake. Gov. VANCE ran ahead of Mr. TILDEN, receiving 685 votes more than the TILDEN elector (LATHAM) who led the electoral ticket, and 786 votes nore than the average received by the Electoral College. The average vote cast for the seven State officers was 123,643; that of the TILDEN electors 122,479. The largest vote ever given for a Democrat in North Carolina was polled for our friend JOSEPH A. ENGELHARD, late Editor of the Wilmington Journal and Secretary of State.

The original returns of the election of 1876 now on file in the Capitol show the following totals of votes polled for State officers and for Presidential Electors: Vance 123,265; Jarvis 123,863; Engelhard 124,010; Love 122,963; Kenan 123,608; Worth 123,936; Scarborough 123,880; Fowle 122,448; Leach 122,251; Latham 122,580; Wooten 122,552; McRae 122,550; Busbee 122,458; Robbins 121,112; Waring 122,530; Glenn 122,534; Avery 122,534.

ANOTHER Ohio man is in luck and is to come to grief. Mr. WEAVER, who was nominated for President on Friday by our friends, the Greenbackers, and by the public enemies of the KEARNEY faction, is an Ohio man by birth, though an Iowa Congressman now. He, too, was a soldier in the late disturbances, beginning his mili tary life as a private and ending it as a brevet brigadier. He is the chief of his party in Congress and has won notoriety as the introducer of a bill to issue five hundred or five thousand millions of green back dollars to pay additional bounties to the Union soldiers, in order to make their pay in greenbacks during the war equal to what it would be in greenbacks worth par

I was mistaken in my last as to the use to which the pine straw is to be put. Instead of making paper of it (for the present at least) it is used to stuff mattrasses, chairs and sofas, and is said to be better, and far cheaper, than hair. The oil extracted is said to have decided medicinal virtue, as might be expected, for everything about the grand long leaved pine is healthful.

When a very young man-some years go-I had quite a liking for the heatre, and remember with much pleasure the various evenings spent in attendance on the performances of such actors as Warren, in Falstaff, Caldwell, in Hamlet, Jefferson, the father of the present Joe Jefferson, in all comic characters, Durand Mrs. Durand, Mrs. Anderson, and the eminent performers of that day. The plays were Shakespeare's, Goldsmith's, and such like, in which there was always an intellectual feast, and after them a farce to make one laugh, and go home to bed in good humor. There has been a change since that time, if I may judge from a performance at Niblo's a few nights ago. A friend presented me with a complimentary ticket, which I concluded to use as it cost neither him nor me anything. The play, which had been performed night after night, was "Evange line," and a sillier affair I never listened to or rather never saw, for it was little more than a spectacular pantomime, the best character in it being a fisherman who did not utter a word, but caught a whale and mounted on its back for a sea voyage, and played other fantastic tricks. I could not out wonder if this is the sort of acting that suits the people of this great city in this intelligent age. It was the fourth time in twenty years that I have been at the theatre, and there may be better things than "Evangeline." I suppose there are, and no doubt there are worse. But this was silly, par excellence, only redeemed by some-thing now and then to laugh at. Preserve me from such another evening. I would rather pay something to keep away, than to go gratis to such a performance. The costumes of the women were, of course, rather scant, but not as much so as in the

"Black Crook," I suppose, from common report; I never saw that.

Judge Tourgee is out again-this time with a book in two parts, called "The Invisible Empire," the first part being "The Fool's Errand," and the second part "The Invisible Empire," giving the alleged reasons or facts on which the "Errand" was founded. It has 16 full-page illustrations, some of which, being alleged pictures of his darkey friends, are ugly enough to frighten children. Tourgee, who puts his name to it this time, says that "it has been well denominated truth in the disguise of fiction." Rather should he have said, fiction in the disguise of truth. I do not mean to say that his book is all fiction. There is undoubtedly more truth in it than there ought to be; but its object and tendency are to produce false impressions, and for these it is appreciated by Northern haters of the South. Tourgee's panacea for all the evils that he depicts, whether real or imaginary, is "general educationuniversal enlightenment of whites and blacks alike." This would be well; I have no word to say against it; on the contrary, would rejoice with all my heart to see it. But general education has not arrested crime in all or any of these Northern States, whose records show vastly more and more diversified crime and wrong doing than can be charged against the South, even by such a maligner as Tourgee. The book is "sold by subscription, price $2. I would not recommend it to any Southern man, but his first book has undoubtedly sold to a considerable extent in North Cirolina, some buying it from one motive and some from another

In one of Mr. Wirt's published letters. some sixty or more years ago—the book has long been out of print—he mentioned by name a Virginia lady as the most beautiful woman he had ever seen. I heard last evening from a kinswoman of hers an anecdote about her that amused me and may be relished by some of your lady readers. A niece threw upon her neck some feminine ornament, and said, "Now. Auntie, look in the glass and see how i becomes you." "Why, my dear," replied the beauty, "I have not looked in a glass for ten years. The last time I did so I thought I noticed some signs of fading, and have not been disposed to recognize or trace it." A friend to whom I mentioned this just now, reminded me that Queen Elizabeth is said to have banished looking glasses from her palace when she found herself fading. I once heard from a gay party of young people who had been tra-velling in the backwoods of North Carolina, that they had spent a night at a house in which there was not, and never had been, a looking-glass, notwithstanding there were young girls in the family.

High Point is a charming and business little town situated one thousand feet above the level of the sea, in the most genial climate of the "Old North State" and is consequently a favorite resort both in summer and winter. It has a hotel-the Bellevue House-of which it may well pride itself. It is one of the finest and most commodious hotels in the south. It contains fifty well furnished rooms. Wilmington and Weldon Railroad.

[From the Newbernian.]

We learn that at a meeting of the A.

N. C. R. R. Directory, Hon. C. C. Clark

offered some resolutions to lease the Wilmington & Weldon Road. Mr. Clark, in support of his resolutions, stated the fact, that the Richmond and Danville Railroad, without money or credit, and being only about one-half the length of the North Carolina Road, actually came over into our State and leased the latter Road, which has enabled the former road to increase the value of its stock from nothing to upwards of $75 per share. With this example before us, Mr. Clark contended that as the Atlantic road was financially in a much better condition than the Wilmington and Weldon road. (as one had a debt ton and Weldon road, (as one had a debt of $2,000 per mile and the other a debt of $8,000 per mile) the Atlantic road should be the lessee. We regret to say that the resolutions did not pass; but we are confident whenever our people have the opportunity to express their opinion, that those in the Directory depending upon Craven county support who opposed them, will be non est.

The Tide at the Turn.

[By the Author of John Halifax, Gentleman.]
"There is a tide in the affairs of men Which, taken at the turn, leads on to for-

"Why, this is like a bit out of 'Cranford," said I to a friend as we came out into the clear winter twilight, from a house where she had taken me to pay a call,

"Yes; Mrs. Gaskell would have made a charming picture out of that cosy little parlor, with Miss Sarah sitting alone there, so round and fat and comfortable looking." ("Pretty, too," interposed I; "she must have been pretty when she was young.") "That parrot, too, it is as good to her almost as a child, and as troublesome." (My friend does not believe in the delightfulness of children.) "And Miss Phillis makes as much of the parrot as her sister. I wish you had seen Miss Phillis; but she is always out of afternoons."

And then I learned how, at the gentleman, very helpless and infirm, whom Miss Phillis for years had gone to see every day, spending an hour or two in reading or talking to him.

"In summer I often used to meet her walking beside his bath-chair. She is not at all like Miss Sarah, but very tall and thin, and decidedly active for her years. This winter I hear her walking beside his bath-chair. She is not at all like Miss Sarah, but very tall and thin, and decidedly active for her years. This winter I hear poor Mr. White cannot go out at all, but Miss Phillis never misses a day in going to see him."

"Is he a relation?"

"Oh, no; only a very old friend. An old bachelor, too—quite solitary. People do say—have said it any time these thirty years—that he had better have married Miss Phillis, and that she would not have objected; but one never knows the truth of these things. They have been most steady friends, anyhow."

Here, truly, was a chapter out of "Cranford," or out of human life generally. Once I had myself chanced to see Mr. White—a funny little old man in a brown Brutus wig—it was difficult to make a sentimental hero of him. Still—

"I have always been rather fond of Miss Phillis," continued my friend. "She would have made a good man's fireside very bright. Perhaps Mr. White was one of those who are always missing their chances, who cannot take the tide at the turn." If so, it was a pity. So many let happiness slip by them, and regret it when too late. Not that I am aware of Miss Phillis's regretting anything. She is a very cheerfulminded woman, and is invaluable now to old Mr. White."

We were neither of us in a moralizing mood, being also cheerful-minded women, and bent on enjoying as much as possible our brief winter holiday—"gentle but kindly," like our own advancing age—so the conversation dropped.

Since, however, it has often recurred to me, in noticing how very common is this fatal peculiarity of not being able to "ake the tide at the turr," especially in love affairs. That of Miss Phillis and Mr. White may never have existed at all, except in the imagination of their friends; but I have known several other instances in which a little honest rashness would have been the best wisdom.

One case especially; a young couple —playfellows from childhood—all heir friends agreeable to and expecting their engagement, nay waiting. somewhat anxiously, for the gentle-man to "make up his mind" and say the final word, which from pure shyness he delayed doing. At last, one Sunday—the young lady was going away on Monday—he determined to speak during their usual evening walk home from church. But, "I'll go to Church with you to-night. said an unconscious, well-intentioned friend. Alas! "two is company, three is none." The proposal was not made -never made. Three days after the lady accepted a long-persistent suitor, who years before had made up his mind-and declared it. Well, no hearts were broken apparently. She married, but her old playfellow a bachelor still. He comes now and then to see her, romps with her children, plays chess with her husband and does not look at all miserable. But perhaps, when he goes back to his handsome empty house, he wishes things had been a little different. However, love, if it be the heart of life, constitutes only a small portion of it externally, to a man at least. On many other matters besides love matters this inability to take the tide at the turn is most fatal. How many a man owes his whole success in life to the faculty of being able to see the golden moment and catch it ere it flies! "All things come alike to all." That is (with very rare exceptions,) every man hasa certain number of chances—the distinction between success and failure is that one grasps them, another lets them slip by. An unanswered letter, an appointment broken, a train missed, may, for all we know, change the color of our whole existence. All the more because we do not know; until, looking back, we see upon what trivial thingsmere accidents apparently-hinged the most important events of our lives. A situation applied for at once, and gained "just at the nick of time: a first invitation accepted, not neglected : & business let'er answered without delay; an appointment kept, with trouble and pains, yet still kept: these small things have many a time proved the keystone of the arch on which a young man has built his fortunes. "Only a quarter of an hour!" said an old man to a young one who was apologizing carelessly for having kept him waiting thus long, "My friend, to that quarter of an hour I owe everything

Between the courage which seizes an opportunity and the sanguine rashness which snatches at everything and grasps nothing, is as wide a difference as between bravery and foolhardiness. A lady once told me how she stood before a post office with a letter in her hand—a momentous letter, written on the impulse of the moment, and with a strong conscientious desire to do the right—all the more because it was painful—how twice, three times, she seemed to feel some invisible hand restraining her own, how she looked helplessly up to the silent sunset sky—then with a sort of desperation dropped the letter in o the box-and repented it to her dying day. But these difficult crises seldom happen. On the whole, far more harm s done by irresolution than by precipitation: even, as I have heard it said, and I agree thereto, weakness is worse than wickedness. At any rate. it is more dangerous. The man who never can make up his mind, who lets chance after chance go past him, is always a little too late for everything, and never knows that kindly Fortune has touched him till he catches the last sad sweep of her garment as she glides by—forever!—the misery which this man creates, and inflicts for it is a fallacy that any one can be nobody's enemy but his own-is, in the aggregate, much greater than that caused by the strong bad man. Him we recognize at once, and against him we can protect ourselves a little; against the other we never can. Our very pity takes up arms against our judgment. For, alas! we know the

Only for a single hopeful minute is the tide on the turn; when once it has turned, it has turned forever, and Leaves him at eve on the bleak shore alone.

All thorough business men and women—for women require to be good 'men of business' too in this our day -know that the aptitude for seeing the right moment to do a thing, and doing it, without rashness, but also without delay, is a vital necessity of success success in anything. He who puts off till to-morrow what can He be done--or ought to be done -to-day, is most hopeless as a clerk, a servant, or in any position where regular, systematic work is required. More fatal s ill is such a quality in a master or mistress-for the real heart of a family is almost always the mistress. If she cannot "take the side at the turn," judge the fittest moment for domestic decisions of all kinds, and carry them out, woe betide her There may be no actual shipwreck, but her household barque will be a very helpless, helmless vessel at best.

This habit of dilatoriness and indeeision is so much of it mere habit hat children cannot be too early taught, first the necessity of making up one's mind, and then of acting upon it. The trick of "hanging about," of wasting minute after minute, hour after hour, in work as in play-for idlers never even play conscientiously—is often acquired in mere infancy, and too often, alas! in imi ation of elders and betters, never to be got rid of to the end of life. What is in the boy or girl pure carelessness, becomes in the man and woman a confirmed peculiarity, which haunts them like a curse, causing no end of misery to themselves and all belonging to them.

For we know our gains and achievements; our losses, our failures, we never fully know. But we may dimly guess at them, by our despair over some application thrown aside and neglected, till the lost chance of benefiting ourselves or our neighbor can never be recalled; our remorse over an unanswered letter, when the writer has suddenly gone whither no kindly word can reach him any more; our regret over cordial visi's left unpaid, and pleasant meetings unvalued, till friendship, worn out, dies a natural death, or burns itself to ashes like a fire without fresh coals. Then we may lay the blame on Providence, luck, circumstances; anything or anybody except the true singers, ourselves-but it is too late. "We cannot help it," we plead, and after a certain time we really cannot help it. There is a disease called paralysis of the will, an actual physical disease, and every one who cultivates, or rather does not strive with all his might to eradicate, the habit of indecision, lays himself open thereto. A baby-even a dumb infant who "knows its own mind," and stretches out the little impetuous hand, quite certain it is the doll or the wagon which it wants to play with, and eager to snatch it, without wasting a minute-is a personage not to be despised but encouraged. The gift of being able to enjoy to-day, not to-morrow, or next week, but to-day, which alone is our real property and also (the one faculty involves the other) of doing resolutely each day's work within the day, is one of the greatest blessings that can fall to the lot of any human being. Let us, who are parents, try by all conceivable means to secure it to our children.

For the young can learn; the old seldom can. "Redeeming the time because the days are evil" is very difficult when the days have become "evil;" when the glow has gone out of life, and instead of the rosy flush of hope the grey twilight of endurance set:les over all things: when we smile at "taking the tide at the turn," knowing that no more tides will ever turn, for us at least; but they may for our children.

Let us teach them, whether or not we have learnt it ourselves, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." And do it at the time. Not "to-morrow," or the day after, or "by-and-by when I am in the mood for it," but at once, at the moment when it presents itself to be done. For the tide will turn, and you never know the moment of its turning. Be first clear-sighted, cautious, prudent, and then be decided.

Make up your mind; but having made

And fear to launch away,

* When the Blaine man retired the Floridians asked the name of the champion of their cause, and when he announced himself as Tourgee, the author of "A Fool's Errand," they closed around him and gave him quite an ovation. While this was in progress a tall and lank New Englander, who had observed the whole performance, stepped forward placed one hand gently upon the authors shoulder, and asked: "And so you've come up here to help elect General Grant, have you?" Mr. Tourgee smiled and acknowl edged that anything he could do to promote that object he most certainly would do. "And I suppose you'll write a book all about it?" the New Englander queried. Mr. Tourgee looked puzzled and answered: Well, no. I didn't intend to, but why?" "Oh, well, nothing," the lank man re sponded in a calm, measured drawl, "I was only thinking that if you did write a book on it the name of the other book would suit the new one to a dot: that's Several gentlemen tried very hard to remember, but not succeeding, the President ordered the Secretary to answer Ajax to the effect that he had better try some other club or go it alone.

"Will you be so kind, my little friend, as to tell your grandmother that the n an who is taking the census would like to see her?" said a down-town census-taker yesterday to a young miss of seven summers. The little one hesitated an instant and then replied: "Yes, sir! I'll tell her, but I don't believe she has any."

He came into the sanctum with a large roll of manuscript under his arm, and said very politely: "I have a little trifle here about the beautiful sunset yesterday, which was dashed off by a friend of mine, which I would like inserted here if you have room." "Plenty of room. Just insert it yourself," replied the editor, gently pushing the waste-basket toward him.

In Albany, Ga., a very interesting and important case was decided on Tuesday last. A young colored lady charged a young colored man with squeezing her hand, and she did not think this the right thing to do unless he (the squeezer) paid for the privilege. The Mayor, who, according to the Advertiser, is a tender-hearted personage and leans very much to the side of the female sex, found the audacious fellow guilty of a very grave misdemeanor, but agreed to let him off if he would pay two dollars and costs or spend ten days in the guard-house.

One hundred and fifty acres of wheat belonging to Col. Thos. M. Holt, of Haw River, was destroyed and the wheat throughout the county was seriously damaged.

The Chapel Hill Ledger says that work on the University Railroad is progressing rapidly. The grading has been completed half the distance between University Station and Chapel Hill, five miles. It is thought that the grading to Chapel Hill can be completed in three months more. All are well and are hard at work.

The Wilmington Review learns that Capt. Jno. F. Divine, Superintendent of the W. & W. and W., C. & A. Railroads, has been appointed Super-intendent of the North Eastern Railroad, from Florence to Charleston, and the Cheraw & Darlington and Cheraw & Wadesboro Railroads also, all of which connect at Florence, S. C. This makes Captain Divine Superintendent of some 540 miles of railroad in this State and South Carolina. Capt. D., we understand, enters upon his new duties on the 15th instant. He will continue to have his headquarters in this city." The Elizabeth City Falcon says that "wheat especially in Perquimans county, is finer than has been raised in this section for years. Corn is fine almost without exception. Cotton is for the most part beyond ordinary, but comparatively little has been planted. Rice and spring oats in Perquimans failed this year, though oats in Camden and many parts of this county are very fine. The flax crop we believe is tolerably good. In some parts it is extraordinarily good, and in others very inferior. Upon the whole the crops in this section are further advanced for the season than we have known them to be for several years. The Newbernian is "reliably informed that a prominent lawyer of this city has been endeavoring this week to purchase, for one of his clients, three hundred shares of the stock of the Atlantic & N. C. Railroad, at ten dollars per share, which offer was declined and thirteen dollars per share asked. What say our people about leasing the road under such circumstances? Undoubtedly, another year would bring the stock up, perhaps, to $75 or $100 per share, and thereby relieve the county of Craven of her indebtedness, which is now weighing down her people through excessive taxation. So much for the Jarvis management."

Meagre and somewhat misty ac counts of the latest South American political difficulty indicate that a civil war, occasioned by a Presidential election, has newly begun in the Argentine Republic. The Argentine Republic is a confederation of the Rio de la Plata, 14 States or Provinces, containing a population in 1870 of about 1,800,000. Its area is some 543,000 square miles, and it is situated between Bolivia on the north and Patagonia on the south, the latter country being claimed as part of its possessions. There are in the Republic about 200,000 foreigners-Americans, Italians, Spaniards, French. English, Swiss, and Germans. Except the Andes, in the west, and other mountainous ranges in the north-west. the whole region is composed of vast plains, covered alternately with rich pasturage and huge thistles. The climate is both temperate and tropical. Rearing live stock is the chief employment of the people. Millions of cattle graze on the plains, along with great herds of mules and horses.

The Seymour Boom.

[Special to Richmond Dispatch, 12th.] WASHINGTON, June 11.—The Washngton Post this morning headed its editorial column as follows: "A Seymour war is approaching that will carry all in the Cincinnati Convention away before it," and in its telegraphic columns announced the fact that General Grant says the Democrats will nominate Seymour. Both these statements were often quoted at the Capitol this morning, and formed the basis of conversations which plainly showed how general is the feeling among senators, representatatives, and other leading Democrats that of all the distinguished men of the Democratic party yet named for the Presidency Seymour by all odds is the man who can most surely beat Garfield. Some coupled the name of McDonald with his, and others that of Mr. Hendricks, but more thought that Mr. Thurman is the proper candidate for the Vice-Presidency. It was often asked "Will the Ohio statesman play second fiddle to any one?" and the reply was Any Democrat can afford at this crisis in the country's history to be second to

Seymour on a Presidential ticket." Little else was discussed about the Capitol to-day except the Democratic nomination, and I went into no squad either to-day or to-night in which Seymour and his chances were not discussed with more or less favor and enthusiasm. All the irformation that comes from New York, either through the press, by letter, or by individuals, gives convincing assurance that if tendered the nomination Mr. Sevmour will accept. Your correspondent who has seen all the booms here, has witnessed nothing like that for Seymour. It is in the very air, and is spreading like an

ITS COLLAPSE. Utica, N. Y., June 11 .- The Observer this afternoon says with reference to Governor Seymour's position that there is no truth in the report that the latter has in any way changed or modified his views with regard to the Presidential nomination. He says now, as he has said all the time, that he is not and cannot be a candidate, and that he could not accept a nomination even if one were tendered him. He deemed it immoral for any one to enter upon public office when his health is unequal to the performance of its labors. He alone can judge of this, and cannot vield his decision to the opinions of others. He has never anticipated the possibility of his nomination, and has only regarded the mention of his name as one of the coincidences which always mark political speculations before the meeting of conventions. In reply to any complimentary allusions to himself he has always distinctly and clearly stated his purpose to withdraw from active part in public affairs, although he felt deep interest in the success of the party to which he was attached. A Senatorial Row.

[Special to Baltimore Sun, 12th inst.] WASHINGTON, June 11.—There was another measuring of swords in the Senate to-day between Mr. Hill, of Georgia, on one side, and Generals Butler and Hampton on the other. The former put on the finishing touches to his strong argument in fayor of ousting Kellogg, and, in conclusion, paid his re pects to the two South Carolina Senators, dwelling at length upon Gen. Butler, whose attack upon Mr. Hill, his friends say, cut too deep ever to be forgotten. Mr. Hill was severe, but delicately so, and, though he indulged in the most scathing sarcasm and provoking ridicule, he appeared lofty and impersonal. He reminded Gen. Butler that he (Mr. Hill) had exerted himself as much as any any one else to secure his (Mr. Butler's) admission to the Senate, and after intimating that Mr. Butler's title to a seat had been the subject of grave doubt in the com-mittee, he said, with great vehemence, that little did he think, when he was working so hard to admit the Senator from South Carolina, that the latter would ever lead off in a crusade upon Louisiana to keep out a better title than his own. Gen. Butler nettled at this, and subsequently, when he took the floor, he absolved Mr. Hill from all political and personal obligations, and challenged him to offer a resolution to inquire into his right to a seat. He became very drematic at this stage, and, in an outburst of eloquence that surprised his friends, he declared that the announcement of the Senator from Georgia that he had Jennings, editor and proprietor of voted to admit a Senator on questionable title, either for personal or political reasons. did not increase his respect for that Senator's character. He continued much in the same strain, and when he finished Gen.

Hampton spoke. This quarrel is the source of much re gret on the Democratic side.

A young woman ran wildly into a St. Louis police station, and said that rats were killing three babies in a certain house. Officers were dispatched to save the infants. but a physician, who was called in to see the woman, discovered at once that she was suffering from delirium tremens, as a consequence of celebrating her eighteenth birthday unwisely.

The Paris Figuro says: "Do not waste your orange peel, but make an incision round it midway, and remove carefully in two halves. Take the two cups and place them hollow downward, one the grass and the other among the plants or vegetables. At the end of a few days you will be rid of all slugs, black or gray. Every morning you will find that they have taken refuge under the cups of orange peel, and can be destroyed."

Who is Your Wife? COMPLEX CONUNDRUM COLLOQUIALLY CONSIDERED. BY WALDORF H. PHILLIPS.

We beg leave to announce that we have published, under the above title, a very novel and remarkable work. It is, in the form of fiction, a humorous and powerful satire on Pivorce Laws and their compli-cations. The author takes for his text a proposed new marriage ceremony, thus:"Do you take this woman to be your wife—until you are divorced?

"Do you take this man to be your husband-until you change your mind?

"Then, they whom I unite, let some Court put asunder."
The work is full of humor and keen satire; it is decidedly a most original and novel addition to American publications, and it is confidently believed will prove the literary sensation of the year. Price, in paper binding, 50c.; in cloth, 75c. Can be had of all Booksellers and News Dealers, or will be sent, postage paid, upon receipt of the price, by the publishers. jel2-tf E. J. HALE & SON.

Every Policy issued by the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States "indisputable," after being in orce for three years.

TWENTY ANNUAL PAYMENT LIFE
POLICY, WITH TONTINE APPLICATION FOR TWENTY YEARS, CALLED THE TONTINE
SAVIN-S FUND POLICY.
ESTIMATED RESULTS.

mount, $1,000: Age. 30: Annual Pay-ments of $30.36. Total Premiums paid in 20 years, $607.20; Reserve on Policy in 20 years, $467.00; Accumulated Dividends in 20 years, $631.00—

104 per cent.: Total cash value in 20 years, $1,098.00-180 per cent.
You pay $30.36 annually for 20 years, and in case of death prior to that period, your heirs wil receive $1,000, which is certainly a very large return for the money paid. If, however, you live to the end of the 20 years, you will have two privileges, either one of which you may elect.

First—Terminate your insurance by withdrawing the total cash value of your Policy, $1,0.8.00, which is the amount of the reserve and accumulated dividends added together, being equivalent to return.

ing you $180 for every $100 paid, besides your insurance of $1,000 tor 20 years. Second—Withdraw, in cash, your accumulated dividends, $631, which is 104 per cent of the premiums paid, and besides receive a paid-up policy for $1,000, payable at death, upon which no further premium will be required, but, on the contrary, this paid-up policy will yield annual dividends. There is no surrender or paid-up value to this policy until the expiration of the Tontine period. Thirty days' grace is allowed for the payment of premiums on this policy, but when taken, a fine or interest, at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, will be required.

It affords me great pleasure in calling the attention of my friends and the public in general to the prominent position now held by the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, which I have the honor of representing. To obtain a full and perfect knowledge of the workings of this immense institution, I would respectfully refer you to the examination of the leaflet "Facts," lately published by the Society, and which is in general circula-tion, but I desire especially now to invite all those who have not yet insured, as well as those who are contemplating additiona insurance, to examine carefully the opera-tions of the "Tontine Savings Fund Policy," which are practically explained above. Those of my old friends I take it for granted are sufficiently satisfied that it is to their interest to carry policies of assurance, but there is a large number of young men now coming upon the stage of life who are to take our places, and who will require especially the aid offered by sound and wellconducted Life Assurance Companies in providing against death as well as matere age. To all such is this plan of assurance particularly adapted. Many of these polieies which have had a shorter period to run are now maturing, and the results prove that no other plan of assurance can or ever has produced such favorable returns. Is there any young man from the age of 18 to 30 who cannot afford to lay aside every year the small sum of $30.36? This amount will secure a policy of $1,000 payable at death, and it is estimated that it will pay the same amount at the end of bank, because in case of death it accom-plishes at once what would require the sav-ings of a life-time.
